

Outstanding Black Women of Yalobusha County: The Project continues Rosa Wright: From Legacy To Dynasty

I got my driver's licenses at 15, and one of my short cuts from school was through what we called the North End. I always looked for Mrs. Rosa Wright sitting on her porch at 219 West Lee Street. The same was true when I was much younger and walked home with my Aunt Pit (Betsy Finch).

On our way my Aunt always stopped to chat with Mrs. Rosa, who personified what we do not have any more - neighbors who watched out for the school children and the neighborhood. Legacy is the word that her daughter, Carolyn, a retired Army veteran, used in her account below about her mother, but Dynasty is a much more appropriate description!

From the 11 offspring born to Rosa and Hezzie Wright, have come several college graduates, bankers, entrepreneurs, a chemical engineer, a preacher, an educator, an army reservist, active duty and retired military. They have degrees from Mississippi State University, Ole Miss, and Delta State to name a few.

A great grandson currently attends the University of Kentucky and announces UK basketball. Their accomplishments are beyond remarkable. I am proud to claim some kinship. Her late daughter, Earline and her husband, John Hawkins, never missed an opportunity to encourage me when I was in school, and then they sent a courageous first black cheerleader to Ole Miss, who took a victorious stand against using the Rebel flag.

Now another son serves as the Chief of University Police at Ole Miss in Oxford.

And I, the first black Ole Miss Admissions Counselor - the first black hired on the administration level - am more than proud and humbled to have known Mrs. Rosa and Mr. Hezzie Wright.

Rosa White-Wright

Now enjoy what Carolyn shares with us about her mother:

A Woman with a LEGACY:
ROSA WHITE-WRIGHT
By Carolyn Wright

Rosa Virginia White Wright, a determined and courageous black wom-

By Dottie Chapman Reed

an of the past, began as a sharecropper's daughter, and the oldest child of Hattie and William White. Rosa was taught leadership and how to become a hard worker. She believed in human rights and stood firmly on her beliefs.

Rosa's parents moved from Water Valley, but she remained in Yalobusha County. She raised a family of her own with her husband, Hezzie Wright, and 11 children on the land of white owners, until they were able to purchase their own home on West Lee Street in 1957.

Living in the City of Water Valley, Rosa became a caregiver to those who were elderly, hungry, or without family to help and the sick. She worked occasionally for Peewee and Frances Sartin's Restaurant and often catered for the First Baptist Church in Water Valley.

My mother was there for her family and produced

Reed is a native of Water Valley and graduated from Davidson High School in 1970. She has launched a project to compile and share info about women in the county who have made an impact on the African American community. Her column appears bi-monthly, with occasional exceptions. She can be reached at (678) 825-2356 or reed2318@bellsouth.net high school and college graduates, something she and my father were unable to achieve. They were born in a time when such achievements for African Americans were not only difficult, but most times impossible. Rosa was determined her family would have a better life.

Spirituality, hard work and education were principles that my mother instilled in our family prior to her death in 1979 at the age of 60. Through our families and our accomplishments, our aim has been to encourage and impact future generations in keeping with our mother's example. From the fruits of her labor our mother's dreams have become a reality and her descendants continue to achieve excellence and give service to mankind and the community. Her legacy lives on and the dynasty reigns.

Thank you Mama!

(Editor's Note: Last week's article on Rosa White-Wright had the wrong picture. The Herald apologizes for the error.

The Facts About CWD Should Scare You

Last week I watched a video of a meeting that was held in Pontotoc a few weeks ago discussing the Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) problem with whitetail deer in Mississippi and I would encourage each and everyone of you to watch the same video. The video can be found on the MDWFP website under the CWD tag.

I will admit that I didn't take all of this seriously until I watched that video. The biologist who were talking on the video were not trying to scare anyone but simply stating the facts associated with this disease. The facts of this disease should scare you. I will list a few that stood out to me.

CWD is exchanged from deer to deer through saliva, feces, blood, and urine. A deer can have CWD for 16 months before it shows any symptoms of the disease up to four years before showing symptoms. A deer that had CWD becomes contagious within six months of contracting the disease. Prion is the word that the biologist used to describe the "germ" that infects the deer and it can remain in the soil for several years.

My translation of this

Kyle's News & Reviews In Agriculture

By Kyle Jeffreys
Mississippi State Extension Service
ANR Agent

is that feeders that have drop tubes or just a corn pile in general is way more likely to pass the disease on. It is also really scary to me that a deer can have this disease for 16 months without ever showing a sign. I can tell you that every deer that I harvest will be tested, which can be done by submitting samples at the district MDWFP office at Enid. I can also tell you that I have never worn gloves or really any kind of protective material while processing a deer but I will from now on. All of the instructions for submitting samples can be found on the MDWFP website. I CAN ASSURE YOU THIS IS A PROBLEM THAT SHOULD BE TAKEN SERIOUSLY AND MORE THAN LIKELY WILL NEVER GO AWAY.

For more information, read the article provided by the Mississippi State Extension office on Page 1 of this week's Herald.

Street Talk

(Continued From Page Four)

are classic Snooky getting in the last say. He's thinking of the fight and backing those still in the ring.

"I think right now in Water Valley, it's the greatest opportunity since I moved here," he said with gusto. "If I was younger, I'd be buying property. These young girls, they've got spunk, they're going to make it.... These girls, they are jumping on the tide, they are adjusting, finding a niche, they're opening eyes."

This Saturday, after Black Friday, is Shop Small Saturday. It is a nationwide campaign reminding people in their shopping for the holiday season to shop local merchants and downtown. Keep Water Valley Punchy.

Don't let heartburn ruin your life.

Acid reflux disease affects approximately 30% of the American population, causing daily heartburn symptoms - but heartburn is only one sign that you may have gastroesophageal reflux disease, or GERD, a serious condition that has been linked to esophageal cancer. Baptist Heartburn Treatment Center at Baptist North Mississippi can diagnose GERD and offers minimally invasive treatment that can help stop reflux. Please go to baptistonline.org/heartburn to learn more and take our short online quiz to find out if you might have GERD.

BAPTIST

northmiss.baptistonline.org 662-636-1000

Get Better.

A Legato Heartburn Treatment Center

NOTICE!!!

COUNTY TAX COLLECTION BEGINS DECEMBER 3

For your convenience, the personal and real property tax can be paid beginning Monday, December 3, for your 2018 County ad valorem and drainage taxes.

Please remember the deadline for paying your 2018 taxes is Friday, February 1, 2019.

The Coffeeville and Water Valley Offices will be closed December 24 & 25 and December 31 & January 1.

When your County Tax Collector's office can be of service - Please call on us!

Thanks,

Linda Rae Shuffield
Assessor-Tax Collector
Yalobusha County